JIM M'GUIRE GOES

Exchanged for Aleck Smith and McGann.

LATEST DEAL BY MANAGER IRWIN

Senators Win From the Cincinnati Reds.

CURRENT SPORTING

Managers Irwin and Hanlon completed a deal this morning whereby Catcher Jim Mc-Guire goes to Brooklyn in exchange for First Baseman McGann and Catcher Aleck Smith, the players to report to the respective clubs tomorrow.

Had this trade been made a month ago there is no calculating the injury that would have been done the Washington club in the matter of attendance, as the veteran is a lic, but at the present time, with Kittridge playing superbly for the Senators. Mca void, and in his place players that are badly needed will be obtained.

Negotiations looking to the acquisition of McGuire were opened by Manager Hanlon when Charley Farrell was injured some time since, and the Brooklyn catching staff thereby greatly weakened. At that time all propositions were turned down as Jim was the mainstay of the Senatorial aggregation, but when Kittridge was secured and it was but when Kittridge was secured and it was observed that he was in fine fettle and a boon to the young pitchers, a more kindly ear was turned toward the city of churches. Manager irwin has always been a great admirer of Danny McGann, and, of course, a first-class first baseman will be appreciated in Washington. Anderson, the big Swede, has crowded Dan out of his job through his tremendous hitting powers, and Manager Hanlon decided upon parting with him and Catcher Smith if a good return, like Jim McGuire, could be secured. McGuire has admitted that his stay in Washington has been too prolonged, and when Farrell was released to Brooklyn some time since Mac put on his war paint and did a war dance because Magnate Earl Wagner thought more of him than he did of Charley, J. Earl has been blocking the deal for the past two days, as ne says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says to the says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire, to the says it will be like to the says it wil past two days, as he says it will be like losing his fifth rib to let McGuire go, but persuasive arguments on the part of Manager Irwin finally won out and the trade was completed.

"Old Reliable" Jim McGuire came to Washington in 1891, and he has been anchored in this city ever since. The Senators changed hands, but Jim was too valuable an asset to let go in trades or transfers, and he continued wearing a Senatorial uniform season after season until a Washing form season after season until a Washington club without McGuire's name will look very strange indeed. Too much high praise cannot be showered upon Jim McGuire, either on or off the ball field. He has always conducted himself as a gentleman, given the club his best efforts and, as J. Earl Wagner says, "it is a pity there are not more players like Jim McGuire, as the national game would be benefited by their membership."

membership." Outside of McGuire's slowness in running he has but one weakness, if weakness it can be called, and that is his gluttony for work. To get the best efforts out of Jim he must be worked almost daily, and a few days' rest will impair his good eye, both at the bat and in the field. With a change of surroundings McGuire should be good for several years yet, and in that time put up exhibitions of catching that will make the youngar element turn green with early. younger element turn green with envy. In leaving Washington McGuire will take with him the good wishes of every base ball 'fan' in the city, and upon his return with the Brooklyn club will no doubt be given a oyal greeting. Danny McGann is the individual that Danny McGann is the individual that should have worn a senatorial uniform last season, but he got mixed up in the gold-brick transaction with Doyle, DeMont, McJames, and went to Baltimore instead of Washington. McGann played first base for Manager Irwin at Toronto in '97, and created a favorable impression all over the ccuntry by his great work at the initial corner of the diamond. He was reserved for the Senators, but the aforesaid trade took him to Baltimore last season, where he played sensational ball. This spring he was carried over to Brooklyn in the transfer of the best Baltimore players, and has been playing finely the decire for a beauty. been playing finely, the desire for a heavier hitter by Manager Hanlon finally crowding him off the team. Manager Irwin says he is a player of the brainy sort, and can be depended upon to carry out his instructions, a detail necessary for the success of the club.

Aleck Smith the "Preadway fashion

the club.

Aleck Smith, the "Broadway fashion plate," the third man in the trade, is a catcher far above the ordinary, without being first-class, and will make a splendid running mate for Kittridge. He is much like "Kitt" in his work, and for this reason will be appreciated. "Aleck" is a better sticker than Kittridge, but lacks the experience and knowledge of the older man. A more gentlemanly fellow than "Broadway" Smith is not playing ball, and he is assured of a hearty welcome in Washington.

Messrs, Irwin and Wagner can be congratulated upon the trade. The Senators will be strengthened at a point of great im-portance, and their fairness toward a conscientious player will be appreciated in allowing McGulre to join a club with pennant possibilities, and probably be a sharer in the spoils that fall to the lot of the

The Senators defeated the Cincinnatis yesterday at National Park, in a loosely played but exciting game, by the score of 10 to 5. Both clubs were off in their fielding, but the complete break-down of the Reds in the ninth inning was responsible for their defeat.

Billy Dineen was on the rubber for the Washingtons and twirled effectively throughout, notwithstanding the poor support in fielding and stupid work on the bases. The husky twirler gave but two bases on balls and under the able coaching of Kittridge was enabled to completely mystify a majority of the Reds' batters. "Kit's" worth to the Senators is becoming more evident every time he gets into the game, as he can be depended upon to work the twirlers up to their full limit of ability. Opposing Dineen was that erratic but effective twirler, Jack Taylor. It was Jack's first game since his escapade in New Jack's first game since his escapade in New York, for which he was suspended without pay, and the Jersey lad doubtless wanted to win the game, and thereby restore himself to the good graces of Manager Ewing and President Brush. But the fates were against him. Up to the ninth inning only ten hits had been made off of Taylor's delivery, and they were scattered in such a way as to prevent scoring. Then came the smash-up, Taylor quit in disgust and the complete downfall of the Reds was welcomed with shouts of joy by the jubilant spectators.

First Baseman Decker was given a trial and his poor work, coupled up with a yellow decision by Umpire Smith, placed the Reds in the game, and kept them there until the sensational climax. Decker is charged with only one error, but his slowness prevented a double play at a critical point of the game, and at the bat he gave a perfect reproduction of Cartwright's effective hitting some seasons back. Umpire fective hitting some seasons back. Umpire Smith bobbed to the front in the seventh inning, and his failure to see a play at second enabled the Reds to score two runs and placed them in the lead. Selbach had and placed them in the lead. Selbach had reached second base in safety on Breitenstein's single over second, and not knowing Bonner had the ball concealed under his arm, stepped off the sack and was touched by the Senators' second baseman. Smith was only a few feet away from the play, but refused to give the out as he didn't see the ball put on Sel until he was back on the sack. Two men were out at the (Continued on Ninth Page.)
